The Big Six elected all their members to the county convention except City Clerk Michael I. Fagen.

Fight in Brooklyn a Surprise to Both Sides-Third Consecutive Defeat for Ely-Democratic Contests in Kings.

Col. Michael J. Dady won again in yesterday's Brooklyn Republican primaries. He defeated Morris U. Ely by 220 majority.

Primary day passed off quietly in Brooklyn and with fewer contests than for several years. On the Republican Smith and ex-State Chairman Nugent, won out.

The next feature of importance in the Democratic primaries was the decisive victory of Mayor Wittpenn of Jersey City over the regular machine, known as the Big Six, for renomination as Mayor. Wittpenn won by 3,000 plurality, according to estimates early this morning. Wittpenn is nominally a Wilson man, but dodged recently when Jersey City rejected the Governor's plan for commission government. The Big Six was for Wilson ostensibly, but showed treachery when a list of nominees was sent to the faithful, omitting five names of Assemblymen who had favored the Wilson measures in the lead.

The next feature of importance in the than two-thirds of the normal vote was side there was only the Dady-Ely fight. That was in the First Assembly district. Ely for the third time headed the opposition forces, including the Union Republican Club and the followers of Alexandidate.

The fight between the Wilson Democratic and the regulars resulted in about an every split for members of the county committee. There was also a close contest between Robert B. Harris and William M. Taylor, candidates for the Republican Club and the followers of Alexandidate.

There was much hustling yesterday by both sides from the opening to the closing of the polls and automobiles was kept scurrying around for dilatory voters. There were some wrangles over challenges, but there was no serious trouble of any kind. Col. Dady directed the fight from his headquarters in Schermerhorn street and Mr. Ely and his lieutenants worked the wires from the Union Republican Club rooms in Court street. From the reports received during the six hours the primary was in progress the voting was supposed to be close. and at the finish there was a scurry around to the rival headquarters to learn the result.

There was much anxiety at each gathering for some time as the returns from the twenty-three election districts were re twenty-three election districts were received, owing to the closeness of the vote, but when less than half the districts had been heard from it indicated that Dady would pull through with a larger vote than he received last year, when his majority over Ely was less than a hundred.

There was great jubilation in the Dady assemblage when the total vote was recorded, giving the veteran leader a majority of 220. This was the total vote:

Dady was elated over the result and was showered with congratulations.

The Democrats had only four primary fights and they were confined to personal rivalries for the district leadership and did not involve the party organization or affect in any way the prestige of John H.
